THE PLANTER'S DAUGHTER;
A TALE OF LOUISIANIA.
By Miss A E. Dupuy.

A leading New York critic says:
"I consider Miss Dupuy to be, in many respects, at the head of American Female Novelists. She excels all others in the construction and development of a plot. She is an acute observer, describes well, and her dislouge is lively and animated. I am inclined to put the "Planter's Daughter' at the head of her novels. It is something in these days to have a Southern moved that is neither Anti-Storper Pro-Savery."
